Sold for $218,500 to London

Impressive ormolu case modeled as a palace below a grotto guarded by komodo dragons, surmounted by a jeweled urn with waterfalls spewing from the mouths of dragon masks. The automata also include a revolving tree pediment, figures crossing a bridge through colonnades and sailing ships. The case having elaborate palace doors on the three sides opposing the clock dial. The body rests on the backs of four elephants, and sets on a stepped wood stand with bronze gadrooning, raised on acanthus leaf and paw feet. This musical automaton combines Asian motifs with ornate European scrolled volutes, balustrades, and finely chased classical medallions, military trophies, and vintner garlands. Clock with three-train movement. In the style of James Cox. English, circa 1780

EXTREMELY RARE AND IMPORTANT HISTORICAL EPHEMERA
The Godfrey Schirmer Collection of American CIVIL WAR ERA ENVELOPES
 Illustrating political, patriotic, and military sentiments of the period

6,000 ENVELOPES TELL HISTORY OF CIVIL WAR
 Denver Evening News of August 5th
 Collection Displayed by Godfrey Schirmer in Lobby of American National Bank Represents Efforts of 20 Years

A pictorial history of the civil war delineated on envelopes was placed on display today in the lobby of the American National bank, 17th and Lawrence sts.

The display represents a small portion of the collection of civil war envelopes belonging to Godfrey Schirmer, president of the bank.

The collection totals 6,000 envelopes, all different, which Schirmer has gathered over a 20-year period. This collection is said to be the largest and most complete in the United States. Schirmer, who is constantly alert to add to it, has been unable to gather a new piece in the last year and a half.

"The purpose of the envelopes was to arouse patriotism," Schirmer says.

Took Place of Newspaper.
 "Newspapers were of narrow circulation and newspaper printing as we know it was unheard of at that time. As a consequence the illustrated envelopes were resorted to to disseminate information, pictures and verses, and arouse the people."

The envelopes cover an almost inconceivable variety of sentiments and forms. Some are colored and some are in black and white. The first crude beginnings of modern caricature may be traced on these letters. Jefferson Davis is caricatured in a dozen different ways, the favorite one being swung aloft on a gibbet. Early envelopes are confined largely to simple designs. Later the designs became more intricate and more varied. There are depictions of Lincoln and of towns, showing camp life, desertion, and military arrangements.

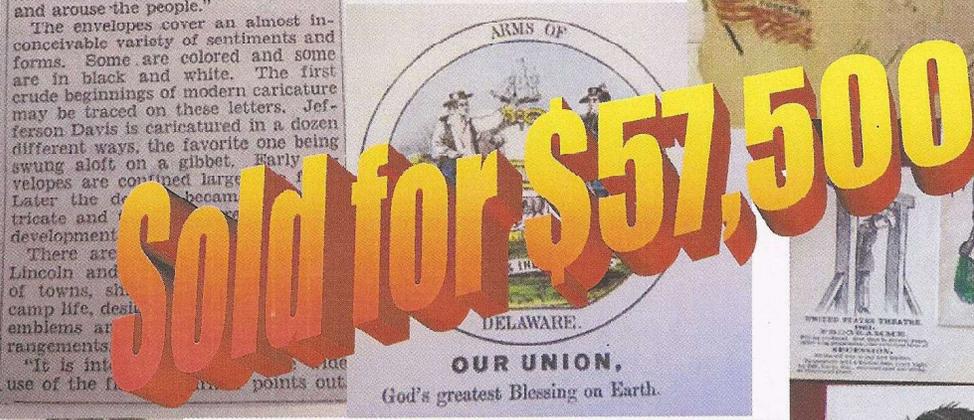

"It is interesting to note the use of the first points out

"There are literally hundreds of different designs.

"Most of these are unused envelopes. Those that have been mailed are much more valuable, of course, and I have a hundred or so of those.

"The envelopes were first issued by the government, and then states joined in. The Confederacy issued them at the outset of the war, but was forced to abandon them soon because of lack of paper. Later Confederate envelopes were made from wall paper, old bills or anything at hand."

One of the most interesting of the envelopes was issued immediately following the death of Lincoln, carrying a picture and description of John Wilkes Booth, so that the slayer might be traced.

This extensive collection of over 5,400 pieces was purchased from Godfrey Schirmer, President of the American National Bank, by the parents of its current owner in 1953. It is now being sold as a collection contained in nine albums.
